Dear FCC:

I am writing in support of Satellite Radio. Not only is it the best quality radio of my lifetime, but it is consistently good day and night. When I travel, I often drive hundreds of miles at a time so their variety is as refreshing as one could wish for.

I especially plead with you regarding the issue of whether satellite radio can carry weather and traffic reports. I've learned, over the years of travel, that I cannot count on regular broadcast radio to keep me out of bad weather or traffic jams. By the time they get past their sponsor messages/ads, it's too late for the listener to avoid the problem ahead. It is a true value (one that should be considered by insurance companies, as well) to know when, what, where and how we are to avoid precarious conditions...and only satellite radio consistently provides that for us.

Thank you for your time in reading my comments.

Sincerely,

Sam J. Young
